SECRETARY'S REPORT.

"To our Class — to the health of the living — to the memory of the dead — to all of our Class."

CLASSMATES: —

Time passes so rapidly, the months gliding almost imperceptibly into the years, that it is only when we meet some mile-stone on the road that we can realize how far we are getting along on our journey.

When bidding farewell to each other and to our Alma Mater, we started forth to begin in earnest the work we had each selected as our own, the Triennial Reunion seemed so distant that we hardly gave it a thought; but even before some of us were fairly at work we had reached that halting place, had exchanged our hasty words of good cheer, had talked over the history of the past three years and the promises of those yet to come, and had again started on our journey. The years have flown by, and this Commencement finds us halting at the Decennial mile-post scarcely able to realize that our life's journey is nearly half completed.

The Report which I have to present to the Class this year records naturally fewer changes than those which have preceded it. Most of us have only to record continued labors in our several professions and occupations; but it is a matter of congratulation that, in very many instances at least, these labors have resulted in marked progress. Some few have made changes in the character of their work, and those who, when the last Report was published, were still undecided as to their future career, have, for the most part, made their selection, and have fairly settled down to their life's work. Some have already acquired a reputation which bids fair in the future to add a lustre to the Class which claims them as its members.

Since my last Report was published we have lost two of our classmates, who, at that time, gave promise of being with us for many years yet to come. For many months, alternating between hope and fear, we watched our classmate Perkins, as his constitution, naturally so strong and vigorous, struggled with the fatal disease to which it was forced finally to yield; and only a few months later, Washburn died, after an illness so brief that many of us did not know he was sick, until the news of his death was received. Among the ranks of those who did not graduate with us we have also lost two. After years of mental suffering, Meconkey passed away, leaving behind him a memory of many an hour in our college life which his presence made so happy, both in its enjoyment and its remembrance. From the West came, soon after, the tidings of the death of Davis, after a long period of physical suffering from a disease which slowly, but none the less surely, had been undermining for many months a constitution whose unusual vitality had alone kept him with us so long. Those of us who were so fortunate as to see him when he last visited Boston will long cherish the memory of the few hours spent with him, and will remember with pleasure how kindly and warmly he spoke of the days of our early college intimacy at Cambridge.

The record of domestic events fills up a large part of this Report, and it is noticeable that the bachelors for the first time are forced to hand in a minority report, and that the descendants of the Class are rapidly increasing.

I would again acknowledge my indebtedness to Sprague for valuable assistance in the preparation of the manuscript and the correction of the proofs of this Report, and my thanks to those of the Class who replied promptly and in detail to my circular.

In accordance with a vote of the Class Committee, and agreeably to the expressed wishes of many of the Class, a Class Supper will hereafter annually take place on the evening preceding Commencement Day. The next Report will be published in 1879.

Renewing the wish which I expressed at the close of my last Report, that this record may serve to strengthen the love we have for our class and the interest which we feel in each other's welfare,

I remain, very truly, your Classmate,

W. L. RICHARDSON.

In 1872, after a very serious illness, resulting in the loss of his left eye, he resigned all his professional positions, and devoted himself to the recovery of his health. In furtherance of the same object he sailed for Europe, May 21, 1874, with the intention of spending some time on the continent.

WILLIAM HYDE APPLETON. From July, 1870, to May, 1872, he was pursuing his studies in Europe, principally at the Universities of Berlin and Bonn. He also travelled through Italy, France and England.

Returning home in the summer of 1872, he accepted in September of the same year the position of Professor of Greek and German in Swarthmore College, Penn.

JOHN WYNKOOP ATWOOD. In the summer of 1871, the firm of Ver Planck & Atwood was dissolved, and the firm of Ver Planck, Atwood & Irwin was formed. Subsequently, in 1873, this firm was dissolved, and he now is engaged in business alone as a wholesale dealer in coal.

He was one of the founders of the Carteret Club in Elizabeth, N. J. He is also a member of the Union League Club in Philadelphia.

JOHN PERRY BARRETT. Leaving Boston December, 1871, he went to Evansville, Indiana, as Treasurer for the contractors for building the Cairo and Vincennes Railroad. On the completion of that road he went to St. Louis (March, 1873) as Assistant Treasurer of the St. Louis & South Eastern Railway Company. Resigning this position January 1, 1874, he returned to Boston as General Agent for the "Metallic Art Works."

In October, 1873, he was admitted, at Washington, a member of the Supreme Court of the United States, and in November of the same year, he was admitted at Sacramento, a member of the Supreme Court of California.

LORING EVERETT BECKWITH. No better record of his life, since the last Report was published, can be given than by quoting from a letter received recently from him: —

As I related in my last account, I organized a Unitarian church in Denver, Colorado, during the year 1871-2. I can give no account of my year in Denver that would be at all intelligible to any one unless he had had the same or a similar experience himself. It is enough, perhaps, to say that it enabled me to appreciate, understand and readily to believe the existence of that description of life and character that we are all familiar with in Mark Twain's "Roughing It," and in Bret Harte's delineations of "Truthful James" and "Heathen Chinee." I cease henceforth to rank those specimens of literature in the list of fictions. What shall I say of my own work? Would it show a lack of humility if I say that my wife and I put our very life-blood into this, our first missionary undertaking? Entirely single-handed, as if by some miracle, we succeeded, and brought some degree of order out of the chaos of the pioneer elements of society that we had to deal with, and at length left the post in charge of a successor, who now continues the work. As a result of overwork, and in consequence of the very damaging effect of the climate of that very high altitude upon my health (Denver being 5317 feet above the sea level), I was compelled to take leave of Denver about April 1, 1872, in order to recruit myself. A month or two later, knowing I could not safely return to Denver, I resigned my pastorate in that city. During the next eight months I was occupied in journeying and preaching, while seeking to regain health and strength. I first visited California, and preached at Santa Cruz two months and a half. On leaving Santa Cruz, Mrs. Beckwith and I made the tour of Yo Semite Valley on foot, a feat, you are aware, very rarely accomplished by a lady. I then came east of the Rocky Mountains, and preached at Kansas City, Indianapolis and Milwaukee, and finally came to Cambridge in December, 1872, and then settled down to the life of candidating, which I continued till May, 1873, when I received a call to Christ Church, Augusta, Maine. My period of candidating was, I believe, marked by nothing noteworthy, unless it were the establishment in Cambridge of a Plato club, composed of ladies and gentlemen ; a club in which we gave several months to the study of Plato's Republic, and derived from it immense intellectual profit and delight. I for one, consider that study as forming an epoch in my mental life. I was ordained and installed in Augusta, July 2, 1873, and have continued in charge of that church since."

Since his residence in Augusta he has served as chaplain at the Togus Military Hospital near Augusta, and also as chaplain in the Senate and House of Representatives of the Maine State Legislature.

While there I 'batched' it with an old mountaineer in his own cabin, 10 by 12 feet in size, built of rough boards. Bathing was a luxury there, where water was peddled about the camp at four cents per gallon, and the tub was generally an empty powder bucket."

*GEORGE WASHINGTON DAVIS. At the time the last Report was published he was residing in East St. Louis, engaged in the practice of law. In 1870 he was elected a member of the City Council, and served in that capacity two years. Even at that time (1871) he had been suffering for fifteen months from a lumbar abscess.

"During the first two years of his illness he was able, at intervals, to attend to the duties of his profession, to which he was most enthusiastically devoted. In the fall of 1871 he was, after some exhaustive labor in the Circuit Court, obliged to confine himself to his room; and, not rallying as he had done before, he decided to try a change.

Accordingly, in January, 1872, he went to the Hot Springs in Arkansas, where he remained six months, without, however, receiving any substantial benefit. The summer of 1872 he spent at Exeter and Rye, N. H. Thence he went to St. Catharine's, Canada, stopping a short time on the way at Pittsfield, Mass. After a short stay there he returned to his home in East St. Louis, and after that spent the winter in Canton, his strength gradually failing. In the spring of 1873 he decided to try another change, and, after a time spent in going about among friends at different places, he went in June to Old Point Comfort, near Fortress Monroe, Va. He revived a little with these changes, but only temporarily. He again began to fail, and he died on Sunday the 22d of June, 1873. His body was embalmed and carried to Canton, Mo., and buried beside his children. He was a Royal Arch Mason, and for four years was the Master of a Lodge in East St. Louis. A large number of the brethren of the Order came from East St. Louis to assist at the funeral."

The above sketch is taken from a letter from his wife, who closes her account of his long illness with the following interesting reference to the closing scenes of his life: —

"He felt most keenly the disappointment at not being able to complete his College course, and resolved to devote himself all the more earnestly to the profession of his choice. All that the most earnest application, supported by unbounded ambition, could do, he resolved to accomplish. But he was only twenty-seven years old when his sickness came upon him, and that is so young.

His sick-room was at all times so cheerful that his friends (and surely no one ever had so many) seemed to love to congregate there. His entire freedom from the egotism and fretfulness that are so painfully frequent in a protracted illness, made it a pleasure to be with him always, so that his room, until the last few months, was a recognized place of resort for his friends. He was a sincere Christian, and felt that only another and more profound source of happiness. Possessed of a large share of that personal magnetism that gives some persons so many friends, he never failed to attach to himself all he deemed desirable additions to his circle.

He was not aware of what the physicians really thought of his case, and was to the last hopeful. Even after we went to Fortress Monroe he frequently spoke of the pleasure he anticipated in meeting so many of his Class, as he was sure to do when we should pass through Boston on our way to Rye again. His class feeling could scarcely have been stronger had he been permitted to go through the course in your company. Remembering his feeling on the subject, I am doubly gratified to know that there are some of you who at your next meeting will think of him."

He begged to be allowed his liberty a little longer, promising not to injure himself or others. The Annual Meeting was held at 12 o'clock. Present:—Barrett, Bixby, Blanchard, Butler, Chandler, Codman, Cogswell, Cummings, Dorr, Eldridge, Elliot, Emery, Fitz, Gorman, Greenough, Hagar, Huntington, Merriam, Munroe, Perkins, Pierce, Richardson, Robeson, Seaver, Sedgwick, Sinclair, Sprague, Walley, Washburn, Waterman, Wildes. 31.

The Class Song was then sung and the meeting adjourned.

Third Class Supper.

June 25th, 1872. The Third Class Supper was held at Taft's Hotel, Point Shirley. The Steam-tug, "C. H. Hersey," left the end of Long Wharf at half past six o'clock. After a sail of an hour among the islands in the harbor, the "C. H. Hersey" was left on East Boston Flats and the class took a row about Point Shirley and finally landed there. The class sat down to supper at eight o'clock. Present:—Cogswell, Cummings, Dorr, Eldridge, Elliot, Emery, Fitz, Goddard, Gorham, Hagar, Johnson, Olney, Pierce, Richardson, Robeson, Sinclair, Sprague, Washburn, Waterman, Wildes. 20.

Richardson presided. A blessing was asked by Washburn. An excellent dinner of fish and game was served, and after the table was cleared the following ode, written for the occasion by Washburn, was sung.

ODE.

Air—"Fair Harvard."

Dear brothers, once more we are met 'round the board,
The old faces familiar we see,
Old memories rise, the old days are restored,
The days of our life light and free;
When the world lay before us for us to possess,
And our sky was unclouded by care,
And bright on our hearts shone the dream of success,
For all who would manfully dare.

We've grappled the world, and the struggle goes hard,
And our hearts feel the trial and chill,
The brave hopes defeated, the purposes marred,
The failure, the sorrow, the ill:
But a place still remains, a warm nook in each heart,
Where the fire burns bright as before,
Where from all the world's coldness and changes apart,
We can live our old fellowship o'er;

And renew the old love, and reknit the old ties,
And look back on the life that is past,
And with hearts stouter grown, and with manlier eyes,
The work of the future forecast.
Though the pathway be dim, and the issue obscure,
Yet we carry the light in our heart.
Let the truth be our guide, and our march moveth sure,
By the word that uniteth each part.

The toast to "Our Class" was responded to by Eldridge. Waterman acted as Chorister, and under his guidance many songs were sung as interludes to many impromptu speeches and jokes.

The Supper was brought to a close about eleven o'clock, and embarking per vias naturales on board the "C. H. Hersey," by this time quietly floating at the end of the wharf, the class reached the city about midnight.

Eighteenth Meeting.

June 26, 1872. Stoughton 8 was secured for the use of the Class. The usual refreshments were provided.

The Annual Meeting was held at 12 o'clock. Present:—Cogswell, Cummings, Dorr, Eldridge, Elliot, Emery, Fitz, Goddard, Gorham, Greenough, Hagar, Johnson, Olney, Pierce, Richardson, Robeson, Sinclair, Sprague, Washburn, Waterman, Wildes. 21.

Greenough presided. The records of the last meeting were read and accepted. The Secretary then presented his Annual Report, which was also accepted. The Class Song was then sung and the meeting adjourned.

Nineteenth Meeting.

June 25, 1873. Hollis 6 was secured for the use of the Class. The usual refreshments were provided.

The business meeting was held at 12 o'clock. Present:—Appleton, Blanchard, Cogswell, Crocker, Cummings, Cutter, Eldridge, Elliot, Emery, Fabens, Greenough, Hagar, Huntington, Johnson, Kennedy, Neal, Parker, Reed, Richardson, Robeson, Seaver, Sinclair, Sprague, Walley, Washburn, Wildes. 26.

Sinclair presided. The records of the last meeting were read and accepted. The Secretary's Annual Report was then read and accepted. The Secretary announced the death of Perkins, and a Committee on Resolutions was appointed, consisting of Blanchard, Emery and Walley. Subsequently the Committee reported a series of resolutions which were adopted. [See page 22.]

The Class Song was then sung and the meeting adjourned.

Twentieth Meeting.

February 21, 1874. The Class met at Crocker's office, 14 Pemberton Square, at four o'clock. Present;—Bixby, Crocker, Greenough, Kennedy, Pierce, Richardson, Sprague. 7.

Crocker presided. The records of the last meeting were read and accepted. The Secretary announced the death of Washburn, and Greenough gave some of the particulars in reference to his death. A Committee on Resolutions was appointed, consisting of Crocker, Bixby and Greenough. [See page 25.] Adjourned.

CLASS FUND.

The Class Fund, a financial statement of which is annexed, amounts to $2,879.00. All the members of the Class now living are subscribers to the fund with the exception of twelve. Two members who did not graduate with the Class have also generously contributed towards this fund. It will be remembered that this fund was collected by means of seven annual subscriptions, each subscriber paying, at the time of graduation, a certain sum, and agreeing to pay also an annual subscription on the six following Commencements. It is a matter of great congratulation that the Class Committee are able to announce that of the original subscriptions, every cent has been paid as agreed, with the exception of course of those few cases where the death of the subscriber prevented the full payment of the subscription. There are of course many expenses, which the Class incurs during the course of a year, which the income of this fund enables the Class Committee to meet without being obliged every Commencement to beg of the members, who may be present at the annual meeting, a larger or smaller amount to meet the running expenses of the Class. These expenses include the cost of the Class Suppers, refreshments furnished on Commencement Days, printing the Class Reports, advertising Class meetings, etc. It is the wish of the Committee that this Fund may be raised to Three Thousand Dollars, the income arising from which would probably be sufficient to pay all the expenses above alluded to. To raise the sum desired, an additional subscription of one hundred and twenty-one dollars is needed. The Committee would be glad to receive subscriptions from those who have not yet subscribed, so as to obtain as soon as possible the desired Three Thousand Dollars.
